Time's Changes.

The more we live, more brief appear, 11 ir life's sur weding stages; A diec to childhoot seems a year; And your like passing ages.

The gladsone current of our youth, Ere passion yet disorders, S.cals, lingering, like a river smooth Along its grassy hurders.

But as the care worn cheek grows wan, And sorrow's shofts the quicker. Ye's are that measure life to man,

Why seem your courses quicker! When joys have last their bloom and breath, And life itself is vapid, Why, as we reach the falls of death,

I'cel we is tide more rapid? It may be strange; yet who would change Time's course to slower speeding, When, one by one, our friends have gone,

And left our bosons theeding? Heaven gives our years of fading strength

Indemnifying fleetness; And those of yanthan seeming length, Proportioned to their sweetness.

I should "come in!" in no aireable conner, for I was indulging in a deticions reverie upon the subject of the lady of inv heart, and the presence of an ordinary mortal was hateful. The door opened, and Mrs. --- entered; I do no, know exactly what I did but it seemed to be a long time before I had power to rise and welcome her, while she stood there with a Gund Un-b upon her lips, which made me feel that it would be too great a happiness to die for.

"I don't wonder that you are surprised to sor me here," she began, with a provoking little lough; that is your astonishment too great to allow you to say how do you do?"

The spell was broken. I started and look her hand; I fear I pressed it more warnly and held it longer than was absolutely necessary. "Perhaps your surprise will be increased," she continued, "when I inform you that I come in linsiness."

I muttered something about not being so ambitons as to hope that she would visit me for any other motive. She took no notice of what I said, but I perceived that her face turned deadly pale, and that her hand trembled as she placed before me a bundle of papers.

"You will see by these," she said in a low hurried voice, "that some property was left me by my uncle and grandfather, but so strictly settled that I can touch nothing but interest .-Now my husband is in want of a large sum of money at this moment, and I wish you to exam- life; but clas! without success.
